WILLCOX SAVAGE

2011 - A YEAR OF GROWTH

In 2011 Willcox Savage focused on strategic growth by delivering thoughtful legal counsel to our clients, and recruiting attorneys who share this commitment.

During the year the Willcox Savage team led by Tommy Johnson and Tom Inglima represented Metro Machine in the sale of the company to General Dynamics. This culminated a relationship dating back to 1987, when Willcox Savage structured the Metro Machine Employee Stock Ownership Plan (ESOP). The deal was captured best by the company's Chief Executive Officer, Richard Goldbach.

An entrepreneurial company like Metro Machine regularly encounters complex opportunities that inevitably involve legal and contractual twists and turns. Capitalizing on these opportunities requires legal counsel that can implement our operational and financial strategies.

Thanks to the Willcox Savage attorneys providing legal and contractual vision and support for over 25 years, the Metro Machine ESOP team was able to parlay its employee ownership capabilities into a tenfold increase in the value of the enterprise it sold in 2011.

Heartfelt thanks from every one of us.
